of Multifamily Housing Development

U.S. Housing Developments for the Elderly.

This is a listing of all elderly housing development Sections 202, 231 and 236 prior to the enactment of Community Development Act of 1974. New construction and the Section 221(d)(3) Market Rate Rent Supplement terminated since the adoption of the 1974 Act. Additional be built under public housing and Sections 202 or 236 assistance under Section 8 of the U.S. Housing Act of 1968.

Section 202--Direct Loan Program for Housing for the Handicapped loans with below-market interest rates with private non-profit corporations, certain public agencies, and consumer cooperatives for construction of multifamily projects designed especially for the elderly or handicapped. Occupancy is restricted to the handicapped and those persons, age 62 and over. About two-thirds of the projects are highrise apartments which also contain many activity areas. About sixty projects have central dining. The projects are subject to HUD review. Rents are based on a below-market interest rate and may include a rent supplement or other types of subsidy assistance for low income residents. The project manager will have information on income limits, availability of rent supplements, and special services available to residents.

Section 202/8--Direct Loan Program for Housing for the Handicapped with Section 8 Rental Assistance -- Directly constructed or substantially rehabilitated housing to serve the elderly or handicapped families and individuals. Loans made to private nonprofit corporations, or nonprofit cooperatives at a below-market interest rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury. Occupancy is restricted to the handicapped persons or families over age 62. The housing projects provide necessary services for the occupants, which may include transportation, health, continuing education, welfare counseling and referral services. The projects are subject to HUD review. Rents are established by HUD and are based on market rents in the community for comparable accommodations. Rent assistance payments under the Section 8 Housing Assistance Program provides rent supplement assistance to low income families. Project managers will have information on income limits, rent supplement assistance, and special services available at facilities listed as being assisted under Section 202. However, most are still in the construction phase. Listed until construction has started.

Section 231--Mortgage Insurance for Housing for the Elderly are insured by HUD-FHA to finance new or rehabilitated eight or more dwelling units specifically designed for the elderly, sixty-two or those who are handicapped. Some units include rent supplements. Developers may be public agencies or profit-motivated groups. There are no income limits for occupancy, except in the case of persons receiving special assistance. The units may include kitchens or dining facilities.

Section 236--Rental and Cooperative Housing for the Elderly HUD formerly encouraged multifamily housing units by insuring the mortgages for the lender and also making interest reduction payments to the lender. Through this program the enterprise was able to provide rental and cooperative housing for low and moderate-income families and for elderly persons. Tenant eligibility is based on income limits. Tenants pay for all utilities except the telephone. Tenants pay no more than twenty-five percent of their adjusted income for rent. Those who can afford it pay the fair market value. Special assistance is available to some of the residents. HUD has information on the income limits and the availability of rent supplements.

Rent Supplements--This program provided monthly payments for substantially rehabilitated low-income housing units, cooperative, or limited-dividend organization owned by a private owner on behalf of the tenants, who must enter into a lease with the owner. A payment generally amounts to the difference between twenty percent of the tenant's gross income and the rent for the unit he occupies, but may not exceed seventy percent of the tenant's income and assets must fall within certain limits. Approximately twenty-five percent of all rent supplements are for the elderly.

II. Public Housing for the Elderly.

Low-rent public housing for the elderly is administered by the Housing Authority. Most cities, towns, and rural areas are under the jurisdiction of one of the 2500 LHAs in the United States.

Elderly housing units are generally found in the following categories:

- 1) Public housing units not designated or designated for the elderly. These units are mixed with the units of other categories and have no restrictions.
- 2) Elderly designated units within a housing project. These elderly designated units may be on one floor of a building, or one section of a building, or they may contain special design features.

) Entire projects designated for the elderly. In addition, these projects may include group dining facilities and special design features.

Tenant eligibility for these housing units is based upon income and asset ceilings which may vary slightly between cities. No tenant may be charged more than 25% of his income. HUD pays the Local Housing Authority the difference between the project rent and the tenant rent.

Contact the Local Housing Authority serving the area in which you are interested for future information regarding current vacancies and special services available to the elderly.
